NEW CEO AT EGAN COMPANY

MINNEAPOLIS, MN (March 9, 2009) – Following a period of transitional leadership, Craig Sulentic has officially retired as Egan’s CEO. Sulentic, who served as the Company’s CEO for 10 years, first announced his intentions to step down in March of 2008.

Jim Malecha, President of Egan Company, now adds the CEO title to his daily responsibilities. He became the Company’s President when Sulentic announced his retirement last year.

“It has been a great trip,” said Sulentic. “With all the right people, a solid mission, and a commitment to integrity and value locked in place, the Company is in perfect position to continue growing.”

“I am extremely excited and humbled to have this opportunity,” said Malecha. “This company has a great history locally and we remain equally optimistic for the future. We are certainly fortunate to be in a market with so many excellent general contractors and building owners,” he added.

With a history dating back to 1945, Egan is one of the largest specialty contractors in the United States. The company offers mechanical, electrical, systems and curtainwall/glass construction and services employing approximately 600 people, seasonally adjusted, and representing 18 trade unions in Minnesota.
